Arbeiten im Museum der Moderne Salzburg

About Us

The Museum der Moderne Salzburg is one of Austria's leading museums for modern and contemporary art, housing extensive collections of Austrian and international art from the twentieth century to the present day.

We are seeking an independent curatorial professional with a strong art historical profile who is able to position historical and contemporary art within a broader international and interdisciplinary context.

You combine academic rigor, curatorial independence and an international professional network with a keen awareness of current artistic discourses and developments.

Your Responsibilities

- Development, conceptualisation and implementation of exhibitions as well as national and international collaborations
- Scholarly and curatorial management of the museum collection
- Developing new perspectives on the collection and its interpretation for diverse audiences

- Conceptualisation and realisation of major collection presentations
- Collaboration with international museums, institutions, artists, researchers and project partners
- Development and production of publications and scholarly accompanying formats
- Engagement with a broad range of artistic media and disciplines, particularly architecture, design and performance
- Further development of the collection and contribution to acquisition and collection strategies
- Acquisition of third-party funding and grants for exhibition and collection projects
- Representation of the museum within national and international professional networks

Your Profile

- University degree in Art History, Art Studies, Cultural Studies, Curatorial Studies or a comparable field
- At least five years of relevant professional experience as a curator in a museum or a comparable cultural institution
- Strong art historical expertise and a sound understanding of artistic developments from the nineteenth century to contemporary art
- Proven experience in the conception and implementation of major exhibition and collection projects
- Demonstrated experience in initiating and managing international collaborations and institutional partnerships
- Curatorial and/or academic expertise in the fields of architecture, design and performance
- Experience in grant writing, fundraising and third-party funding acquisition
- Excellent written and verbal communication skills
- Strong organisational abilities, initiative, social competence, a solution-oriented mindset and the ability to work collaboratively in a team environment

We Offer

- A diverse and responsible role within an internationally connected museum of modern and contemporary art

- The opportunity to develop an independent curatorial profile and play a key role in shaping exhibition and collection projects
- A flexible home office arrangement
- A minimum annual gross salary of EUR 43,000, with willingness to offer a higher salary depending on qualifications and experience
- The opportunity to work in a renowned institution located in an attractive region with an exceptional quality of life
